

Jarah C.

MEET THE ADVOCATE

Jarah is the new Victim Advocate at DVACK! Jarah had worked in our safe shelter while attending college. She then went on to work in law enforcement, where she learned many skills in communicating and working with people but is excited to continue helping others in a different capacity.

Being an advocate has allowed Jarah to be there for our clients, meeting and counseling them as they determine the best way to progress forward. She does this by listening to their experiences and believing in them. Jarah says, "Providing services and support to survivors is important because some survivors have nowhere to go and feel they have no one they can trust. We are that beacon of hope to those who truly need help."

Jarah says that since working at DVACK, she has most enjoyed the comradery between advocates. "Everyone works together so well and shows empathy towards survivors. It has been extremely refreshing to be surrounded by individuals who take it upon themselves to show kindness to others." She also said that she values the opportunity to be in that supportive role when others need help.
